Auckland-born Dani Robinson has a lust for life, and a passion for health, fitness and "smashing goals".

She believes positivity is the key that has helped her to reach her goals, starting every day with a clean slate and determined attitude.

Sharing her daily workouts, adventures and travels with her many social media followers, Dani's audience has grown to over 60,000 fans collectively.

Dani's face might look a little familiar - she made her television debut in 2015 as one of the contestants in the first season of The Bachelor NZ. Dani enjoys the spotlight, and has always been confident in the public eye.

With a knack for public speaking and MCing events, it was an easy and natural progression for Dani to move into this space. She has recently hosted the L'Oreal Colourista Launch Party, spoken at events on behalf of Cure Kids, and was a panelist on Stacey Morrison's Whānau Living television show.

Dani is also a successful woman in business, commanding a high-flying role in the mainly male-dominated manufacturing industry. She has mastered the art of standing her ground, and backing her decisions, and attributes her career success to self-belief.

Dani is creatively minded, and approaches social campaigns with a fresh perspective and positive attitude. Her and partner Logan Dodds have a comprehensive camera kit (which even includes a drone), and create visually stunning imagery and video - perfectly capturing the ethos of the campaign.
