

Rawdon Christie

Rawdon is an award-winning broadcaster with a TV journalism career that spans twenty years.

His career started with the BBC but he's best-known for presenting Television New Zealand's Breakfast show, where he interviewed hundreds of guests, from senior politicians and business leaders to Oscar winners and Olympic champions. Rawdon has also presented political show Agenda and the NZ version of Dragon's Den, but his career highlight was anchoring TVNZ's coverage of both Christchurch earthquakes. Rawdon now divides his time between his role as Creative Director at the National Business Review, MCing / presenting at conferences, and running his own communications training company. He's also guest interviewer for Unfiltered TV. Rawdon Christie Communications offers training in Media Relations, Presentation skills, Relationship-building and Reputation Management. Rawdon's presently converting these training programmes into a series of online courses that will launch in early 2019

Testimonials

Rawdon's unique ability to galvanize the audience by cleverly weaving his witty humour together with his knowledge of the audience's industry positions him as an outstanding speaker, and one that our members speak incredibly highly of.

In addition to being a guest speaker, we have also used Rawdon to facilitate a political forum on Education. This event was a resounding success due to Rawdon's skills as a facilitator. He was able to keep the session flowing, ensuring that each MP felt listened to.

It is evident from Rawdon's work with our Association that he is committed to preparing and presenting at the highest level.

I recognise Rawdon as one of the most professional MC's I have come across. His planning for an occasion is in-depth, his manner tries to react to the crowd attending and he can be both serious or have some fun depending on the occasion. From raising money for charity to a business network meeting, Rawdon's past career in television certainly comes through and I would recommend him to any company to use his outstanding skills.

Rawdon did an incredible job delivering a really powerful message to our valued customers. His content was well thought out, and really well presented, but also incredibly relevant for the industry we are in. Rawdon knew how to apply it and engage the audience throughout. The feedback from everyone was so positive & we look forward to booking him again for more events!
