Dominic needs little introduction, having hosted most of NZ's highest-rating reality TV shows throughout his 20+ year career. His countless episodes of live television (in New Zealand and the US) have engaged and entertained audiences of every demographic around the world.

He is also a master MC, who has fronted numerous events, as well as a voice artist and digital content creator. More recently, Dominic developed and launched his first podcast, Wellbeings, a series of conversations with thought leaders in the wellness space, to shed light on accessible strategies that science has shown make a meaningful impact on people's lives.

Dom started his epic broadcasting career in 1999, hosting children's television, before moving into presenting magazine-style music show Space, where he started his long career of interviewing international superstars, such as Pink, Coldplay, John Mayer; and spent time touring the country with Robbie Williams filming a TV special. This was followed by his first major television role, hosting NZ Idol in 2004.

Since then, Dom has hosted a plethora of TV and radio shows, not only in NZ, including X-Factor, Dancing with the Stars NZ, and numerous quiz shows – but also Australia and the USA (co-hosting the DWTS USA all-access/behind-the-scenes show; and The Next Greatest American Band) and interviewed virtually every A-List movie star on the planet. He has reported for Sky Movies and SoHo, E! in NZ, Australia and E! digital in the USA; ABC Online, CNN. As an MC, it is not an understatement to say that Dom has hosted literally hundreds of live events over his career; including awards shows, charity events, gala dinners and prize-givings, as well as a black-tie event for 10,000 people. But he's just as at home hosting intimate cocktail affairs.

While live TV and events will always hold a place in Dom's heart, over the past few years, he has deeply immersed himself in his passion for working with start-ups and entrepreneurs, supporting new endeavours and connecting them with investors who can turn their dreams into reality.

He is an ardent supporter of ventures focused on sustainability and conscious consumption, particularly those with a focus on innovation and technological advances; renewable resources and environmental preservation; or products and services that encourage community engagement, collaboration and connection.

Well-versed in digital content creation, Dom has undertaken social media campaigns for both global and local brands, including Samsung, Mazda, Spring Spa, Edison Clinic, DarkHorse and Moet.

Additionally, Dom is a very experienced in voice artist and can present with a neutral, Australian or American accent.

Cementing his reputation as a true renaissance man - Dom is a qualified marriage celebrant, who has officiated at a number of weddings for his friends and family.

On his down-time, you'll find Dom with his family and friends; traveling to far-flung destinations; or focusing on his fitness and wellbeing, incorporating breathwork and holistic therapies.
